3.4.1: Outcomes of Extension activities in the neighbourhood community in terms of impact and sensitivity the students to social issues for their holistic development during the last five years.

Institutional Social Responsibility (ISR) is a powerful tool for fostering civic duty in students and making a positive societal impact. By engaging students in meaningful activities that address social, environmental, and community challenges, ISR goes beyond the typical academic routine. Various activities were held, involving 1707 students. These initiatives highlight the dedication of educational institutions and students to societal improvement. The diverse and well-planned ISR activities focused on key societal concerns:

- Health and Hygiene, Swachh Bharat Abhiyan: Students helped clean their surroundings and raised awareness to promote a healthier environment.
- Hospital Visits: Visiting patients provided comfort to the ill and elderly, teaching students empathy and the importance of aiding those in need.
- Donations to Orphanages: Students contributed food, medication, and school supplies to help needy children.
- Blood Donation Drives: Participation in blood donation drives demonstrated a strong commitment to saving lives through critical blood transfusions.
- Teaching in Public Schools: Interacting with government school students and educating them on various issues supported their academic growth and offered mentorship, fostering a sense of community.

In the past 5 years 1707 students have participated and contributed in various social service activities. Participation in these activities not only shows students' dedication to societal well-being but also helps them develop vital life skills such as leadership, cooperation, and empathy. ISR programs profoundly impact students, inspiring them to be responsible citizens and cultivating a lifelong sense of social responsibility.
