- Teaching Learning Process

1. The Teaching-Learning Process is a foundational pillar of Outcome-Based Education (OBE) within the management program. The department actively ensures that academic delivery transforms student cohorts from varied backgrounds into industry-ready corporate leaders. To maintain high standards of academic merit and institutional diversity, admissions are institutionalized strictly via two main pathways with a balanced allocation strategy:
 - PG CET (Post Graduate Common Entrance Test): 50% of the total intake is allocated through state-level counselling, bringing in meritorious students with verified academic competence.
 - Management Quota: 50% of the seats are allocated to eligible candidates who undergo internal aptitude assessments, group discussions, and micro-presentations to test managerial potential.
2. Induction, Orientation, and Transitional Bridge Courses: Recognizing that MBA aspirants come from diverse undergraduate streams (such as Commerce, Arts, Science, and Engineering), a systematic transition process is built into the start of the Program:

- Initial Interaction: During the admission and onboarding cycles, committee members and core department faculty interact directly with prospective management students and their parents. This sets clear institutional expectations regarding academic rigor, attendance regulations, and professional code of conduct.
- Orientation Programs: A structured orientation introduces students to the institution's robust support infrastructure, including:
 - Dynamic training and placement cells.
 - Internal Quality Assurance Cell (IQAC) standards.
 - Management Bridge Courses: To equalize the learning baseline, the department conducts mandatory bridge courses covering Fundamentals of Accounting (for non- commerce students) and Basic Quantitative Techniques & Statistics (for non- engineering/science students).

3. Faculty Readiness and Lesson Planning: Before the commencement of each academic semester, the teaching framework is standardized across all specializations (Marketing, Finance, HR, and Business Analytics):

- Course Allocation: Subjects are allocated to domain-expert faculty members based on their research backgrounds, industry experience, and academic specializations.
- Lesson Plans & Bloom's Taxonomy: Faculty members prepare micro-level lesson plans well in advance. These plans explicitly state the Course Outcomes (COs), corresponding pedagogical tools (e.g., Harvard Business School case studies, simulation games, field assignments), and mapping metrics to track standard Graduate Attributes.
- Master Timetable: A comprehensive department timetable is executed systematically, clearly outlining faculty-course handling matrices, library periods, and skill-development slots.

4. Continuous Evaluation and Internal Assessment System: Student performance and progress monitoring are deeply institutionalized through a rigorous Internal Assessment (IA) framework executed in strict accordance with University and National Education Policy (NEP) guidelines:

- Attendance & Regular Evaluation: Student attendance is monitored daily and reviewed weekly by Department Heads to ensure consistent engagement.
- Internal Assessments: Typically, two centralized Internal Assessment tests are conducted per semester to evaluate conceptual and strategic clarity.
- Continuous Assessment Components: To promote active learning, a minimum of are mandatory per course. In the MBA context, these take the form of real-time corporate case-study write-ups, industry sector analyses, and corporate certifications.

5. Specialized Mentoring System: A dedicated, high-impact Mentoring System is operationalized within the department to foster personalized academic and professional development:

- Structure: Faculty members are assigned a specific cohort of students to act as their dedicated advisors and career coaches throughout their postgraduate journey.
- Execution: Mentors conduct bi-weekly evaluation meetings to track individual academic performance, counsel students facing learning difficulties, and assist them in choosing specialization tracks aligned with their career goals.
- Corporate Readiness: Mentors actively prepare students for final placements by organizing mock corporate interviews, resumes reviews, and professional grooming feedback loops.

6. Innovative Pedagogies, Corporate Collaborations, & Skill Enhancement To move past traditional rote learning and establish definitive industry alignment, the program emphasizes active, industry-sponsored training methodologies and elite professional credentials:

- Innovative Teaching Methods: Faculty members incorporate digital learning platforms, experiential business simulations, real-world role-plays, and flipped-classroom methodologies to deepen strategic engagement.
- Advanced Professional Certifications: The curriculum integrates high-tier industry collaborations directly into the learning timeline:
- KPMG Certification Programs: Students undergo specialized training modules curated and evaluated in collaboration with KPMG. These modules deliver deep operational insights into Corporate Finance, Risk Management, Digital Transformation, and Business Consulting, exposing students directly to global consulting workflows.
- AIMA (All India Management Association) Certifications: The department collaborates with AIMA to offer advanced certification modules (e.g., Business Analytics, Digital Marketing, or Simulation-based Strategic Management). This ensures that students are trained via nationally recognized benchmark standards, bridging any existing university-to-industry curriculum gaps.
- Online Learning Platforms: Beyond institutional certifications, students are encouraged to complete specialized micro-credentials via NPTEL, Coursera, or LinkedIn Learning.
